

BOCELLI FAMILY WINES

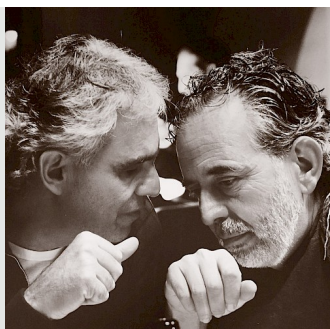

Sangiovese Toscana IGT 2010

With its ripe raspberry, blueberry and black cherry tastes, it complemented the sweetness of the tomatoes and tamed the heat of the hot sausages. The fruit is accented by subtle leather and brown sugar notes. There is decent tannic structure and alcohol is 13 percent.

The wine's marketing notes point out that the Bocelli family has been making wine for more than 130 years. It shows. This inexpensive red can compete with any number of Chiantis and other Tuscan wines at this price. Is it a profound wine? No. But it's simply delicious – a very good wine first, a celebrity wine second. And for that I say: Bravo, Andrea.
